

Working to Protect the New Forest

CEREBRAL Not PHYSICAL NEWSLETTER EDITOR

The New Forest Association (NFA) is one of the oldest conservation organisations in the world. It is dedicated to protecting and sustaining the traditional character of the New Forest. It promoted the New Forest Acts in the nineteenth century and today is the New Forest National Park critical friend and watchdog - an independent, campaigning charity based on its membership and volunteers. Volunteers do not have to be members of NFA.

Three times a year it produces a newsletter for members and seeks an editor to contribute, encourage contributions from other members and societies, collate and arrange publication. Consideration is currently being given to distributing the newsletter and articles more widely as a recruitment tool.

The current editor, who lives in the north of the Forest will produce the next two issues and there is adequate opportunity for handover.
